One of Facebook Messenger's most highly requested features — group video calling — is finally rolling out now via an update to the app. Up to six people can video call at the same time, but Facebook doesn't want to force everyone in a group to participate. As Product Manager Andrew Song told Digital Trends, not everyone is always "video-call ready." "We designed this experience with mobile phones in mind," Song said. "And we were trying to figure out how we can create this party or fun atmosphere with a set of people. Being able to get in the same space and have that energy that you would if you were in the same physical space is what this is really for." If the video call limit has filled up or if you're at work and can't join in, you can still see what's going on and respond with messages or your voice. The company says up to 50 people can listen in a group call and "chime in via voice" or continue to send messages as well. You'll have to create a group or be in an existing one to be able to tap on the group video call icon — each person can join in when they're ready with a tap, and you can ring certain people or the whole group. The Messenger team recently released an update that improved the camera in the app and introduced 3D effects, stickers, and masks that can be added to photos and videos — similar to Snapchat. These 3D effects can be used in real time during video calls as well — it's available for iOS at launch, and it's coming soon to Android. Song says the team is focusing on its next billion users, and believes that recently introduced features like Instant Games, and Instant Video are key to attracting a new audience while maintaining its current user base. The group video call update is rolling out globally on iOS and Android. one-on-one video calls.Telegram has announced a big new update that "takes video "to the next level." The popular messaging app has made improvements to nearly every video-focused feature — including group video calls, video messages, and the media player.Group video calls on Telegram can now have a total of 1,000 viewers. However, the app still allows only up to 30 participants to broadcast video. Telegram is also improving its Video messages feature by adding support for higher resolution. You can record a video message by tapping the microphone icon in the message bar to switch from voice message to video. Similar to voice messages, you'll need to press and hold to begin recording. You can also now tap on a video message to expand it. Tapping on an expanded video message will pause it and allow you to fast forward or rewind the message.The app's media player now supports multiple video playback speeds: 0.5x, 1.5x, and 2x. On the best Android phones, you can even replay videos at 0.2x speed. To switch between different playback speeds, press and hold the 2X button when playing voice or video messages.Another feature that many users might find helpful is the ability to share your screen with sound from your device when broadcasting in one-on-one video calls. Telegram's Auto-Delete feature has also been updated and now offers a new "one month" option. You can enable the timer for your messages to erase themselves by tapping on : > Clear History and choosing a duration.Aside from the video improvements, the update introduces new lightweight animations for text messages on Android. When you send a message, your text will "smoothly transform into the message bubble as it flies into chat." These animations were rolled out to iOS users with the previous Telegram update. Telegram Logo Lifestyle (Image credit: Chris Wedel/Android Central) Telegram has finally added the ability to make group video calls to its mobile and desktop apps.Group video calls are limited to the first 30 people who join a voice chat.The latest Telegram update also adds animated backgrounds, message animations, and more.Telegram, which is one the best Android messaging apps, is rolling out a new update that finally lets users turn voice chats in any group into group video calls. The feature is now available on all devices — including tablets and desktops. Telegram says group video calls will "bring voice chats to a whole new level, ready for online classes, business meetings and family gatherings."Source: Telegram (Image credit: Source: Telegram)Although there is no limit on the number of people that can join an audio call, video is currently available only for the first 30 participants. However, Telegram is working on increasing this limit "soon." To begin a group voice chat, open the three-dots menu in the profile of any group where you are an admin and tap the "Voice Chat" button. Once users join and turn on their cameras, you can tap on any video to make it fullscreen. Users can also choose to share their screen during a group call by tapping on the "Share Screen" option from the three-dots menu.Group video chats have been optimized for both portrait and landscape orientation on the best Android tablets. Once you open the side panel, you can see a split-screen view of the video grid, along with a list of participants. On desktop, group chats open in a separate window and offer a selective screensharing feature, making it possible for you to broadcast an individual program instead of the entire screen.The latest Telegram update also makes it the first messaging app to offer animated backgrounds for chats. You can access animated backgrounds by heading over to Chat Settings > Change Chat Background on Android devices. You can even create your own animated backgrounds and share them with friends and family. More people, less cost, please One of the big upper hands Google Hangouts enjoys over Skype right now is free group video chatting, while Skypers have to pay for Premium for the same benefit.When TechRadar asked if this could change in the future, Skype told us that it is something that it's working on. "Yes, it's something we want to do in the near future," Yasmin Khan, product manager for Skype Premium, confirmed at the Skype offices in Stockholm. "We realise this is an urgent need for our Skype users."Right now, Skype says that it's looking to ensure that the service will work well across all devices and isn't giving any further details of why it's still holding back.However Skype told us that its Premium service is doing well right now. Despite this, it's clearly feeling the pressure of Google Hangouts offering more for less.I'm free, I'm free callin'Skype also confirmed that it also has a number of other priorities for the future. Making the Skype experience better on multiple devices is currently top of that list, with an emphasis on being more Cloud-focused, according to Karlheinz Wurm, General Manager of Product and Test for Skype and Lync Real Time Media at Microsoft.Microsoft has already announced that the Xbox One will come with six free months of group chatting for those with a Gold Live subscription - let's hope it's not long until it makes it free all the time for everyone. It's sounding hopeful. (Image credit: WhatsApp) In this social distancing time, knowing how to use WhatsApp group video calling can keep you in touch with your family and friends around the world. WhatsApp group video calls are a good Zoom alternative for smaller groups, especially since it's end-to-end encrypted.WhatsApp is a popular messenger app which supports voice and video calls. The service introduced group video calls in 2018 and recently has increased the maximum group size to eight people (plus, WhatsApp is testing 50-person group calls). WhatsApp is available on both iOS and Android, and while there is a browser and desktop version of the app, you can only make calls on mobile.The coronavirus pandemic has led to huge demand for video conferencing software and video call apps. Zoom became a household name, thanks to fun backgrounds and the grid layout view. But other companies have stepped up their game, adding features and functionality to Google Meet, Skype and Facebook Messenger.WhatsApp (owned by Facebook) has also rolled out improvements, including the increase in group size. That makes it easier for you and your loved ones to catch up and attend virtual parties on a video call. Here's a guide on how to use WhatsApp group video calling.First, WhatsApp recommends that you have a strong internet connection when placing a video call. A poor connection will result in poor video and audio quality. Second, make sure your phone software and app are updated. On Android, video calling is only available on Android 4.1 and higher.How to use WhatsApp group video calling: From the Calls screenOpen and sign into WhatsAppIn the bottom navigation bar, tap Calls.In the top right corner, tap the icon of a phone with plus sign.Tap New Group Chat.
