A robot vacuum can help by sweeping and mopping your floors. Our list of the best robot vacuums do a great job at this, but there are a few new models coming in 2020 that look intriguing. Here are some of the robot vacs on our radar, including models from Eufy, iLife, Roborock and more.(Image credit: Anker)The Eufy RoboVac G30 Edge is a big step up from the company's current lineup of robot vacuums. The G30 Edge has what Eufy calls Smart Dynamic Navigation, which lets it map rooms in real time. Unlike other robot vacuums, which let you create virtual boundaries within an app, the G30 Edge still relies on boundary strips and external sensors. However, the G30 Edge has a 100-minute runtime, and can automatically return to base and recharge itself when its battery runs low, and then resume where it left off. It can also be controlled using Alexa and Google Assistant. Price: $319.99Availability: January 2020iLife A10(Image credit: iLife)iLife is introducing several new robot vacuums for 2020, but the A10 looks to be the most advanced. It's the company's first with laser navigation, which creates a 360-degree scan of its environment. Similar to several other of iLife's vacuums, the A10 is a combination vacuum cleaner and floor mopper; while we've found these combos to be less than effective, the A10 takes a different approach. If you want to mop, you have to replace the dustbin with a water tank. The A10's tank also vibrates and has three water flow levels, which the company says should help loosen stains on the floor. Price: Unknown Availability: First half of 2020Narwal(Image credit: Narwal)While iRobot and Shark both have self-cleaning robot vacuums, the Narwal looks to be the first mopping robot vacuum that can rinse its own pads. A base station has two buckets—one for clean water and one for dirty water—and holds enough liquid for a 2,000-square-foot house. The Narwal also works as a robot vacuum for cleaning rugs, and a suite of sensors—Lidar, collision, and obstacle avoidance—help it navigate your rooms and create a map of your home. The vacuum can be controlled by an app, though the company is still working on integrating smart assistants. The one thing to note about the Narwal is that it's currently a Kickstarter and Indiegogo project; on Indiegogo, you can currently preorder a Narwal for $599, with expected delivery in February.Price: $599Availability: FebruaryRoborock S6 Pure(Image credit: Roborock)The Roborock S6 Pure has many of the same features as the $649 S6, which was launched last year: laser navigation, the ability to create virtual barriers, a 3-hour runtime, and a water tank that also lets you mop the floors. Though the Roborock app, you can also selectively choose which rooms you want to clean, too. However, the S6 Pure has a larger 180ml water tank (the S6's tank is 140 ml), which lets you mop a wider area. And, the S6 Pure will be $100 cheaper when it comes out in the second quarter of this year. The S6 Pure, like the S6, will also work with Alexa. Price: $549Availability: Q2 2020Trifo Lucy(Image credit: Trifo)One of the recurring complaints about robot vacuums is that they can't recognize poop, so if your furry friend makes a mess on the floor, your robot vacuum might smear it all around your house. Trifo's Lucy robot vacuum uses a combination of cameras and AI to identify objects—even ones smaller than 1 inch in height—and avoid them on its rounds. In addition to floor nuggets, the Lucy can recognize people, and can even be set to a patrol mode when you're not home. According to the company, the Lucy has a 120-minute runtime, and a powerful 3,000 Pa vacuum.Price: $799Availability: Late Q1 bObsweep WPP56001 PetHair Plus Robotic Vacuum Cleaner and Mop, Charcoal - Use Manual - Use Guide PDF. Bob may sometimes find it difficult to clean under chairs with narrow legs, or furniture that is too low for his bumper sensors to detect. Specialty furniture, such as desk chairs with wheels or stools with circular bases, may also confuse him for a moment — but don't worry, Bob usually finds his way around with time.Bob uses infrared light to detect edges and stairs; because dark-colored carpet absorbs most light, it may seem like empty space to Bob's sensors. IfBob displays that there is "something funny going on" with his edge sensors, then you may need to temporarily deactivate them. To do so, simply hold down the CHECKUP button on Bob's cover until the 4 bars above "Check Up" flash 7 times and remain lit on his screen. Just remember that while Bob's sensors are deactivated, he will not be able to detect edges or stairs!Bob's main brush is not designed to clean shag carpet or rugs with long fibers or fringes. You may remove Bob's main brush and allow him to vacuum without it, but he will not clean as effectively.Bob's mop, which attaches to his underside, is designed to sit flat against the floor and leave behind a clean trail. Because of this, Bob may have a tough time climbing over elevated surfaces while mopping. Make sure to remove Bob's mop when he is not cleaning smooth surfaces such as tile or hardwood.Newest Added: bObsweep Junior Robotic Vacuum CleanerTags: BObsweep Vacuum Cleaners User Manuals, BObsweep Vacuum Cleaners Use Manual, Bobsweep Pet Hair, Bobsweep Pro Gold, BObsweep Pet Hair Plus, Bobsweep Manual, Bobsweep Pethair Manual
