Health effects of fine particulate air pollution: lines that connect. In addition, several ongoing panel studies are examining associations between air pollution and subclinical health outcomes before, during, and after the 2008 Summer Olympic Games in Beijing. Washington, DC: World Bank; 2007. Outdoor air pollution has become a major concern for public health. In 2004, the annual average PM10 concentrations for major Chinese cities were 102 µg/m3 in southern cities, 140 µg/m3 in northern cities, and 121 µg/m3 in cities nationwide. Finally, pollution needs to be reduced and air quality and health indicators need to be monitored; this will enable the people and relevant authorities to be aware of the trends and consequences of air pollution, so they can determine how to ameliorate the situation.Chen B, Hong C, Kan H. 2008), with significant health effects detected at air pollution levels below minimum air quality standards in China. 2004;198(1-3):291-300. Public Health and Air Pollution in Asia (PAPA): a multicity study of short-term effects of air pollution on mortality. Exposures and health outcomes from outdoor air pollutants in China. The World Bank (2007) estimated that the total health cost associated with outdoor air pollution in urban areas of China in 2003 was between 157 and 520 billion Chinese yuan, accounting for 1.2-3.3% of China's gross domestic product. Changes in respiratory and other clinical symptoms, lung function, and immune function are also studied.Dozens of time-series studies have been conducted in large Chinese cities, including Beijing, Shanghai, Chongqing, Shenyang, Wuhan, and Taiyuan, to assess the association of short-term exposure to air pollution with mortality or morbidity (Chen et al. [Google Scholar]Pope CA, III, Dockery DW. A recent multicity time-series analysis in Hong Kong, Shanghai, and Wuhan provided further evidence of short-term risks (Wong et al. However, results of these analyses are difficult to interpret because of the lack of information on potential confounders.In short, there is sufficient evidence that exposure to outdoor air pollution is a health hazard in China. Generally, PM levels in cities in the north are higher than those in the south, whereas SO2 and NO2 levels do not differ much. [PMC free article] [PubMed] [Google Scholar]World Bank. Coal is still the major source of energy, constituting about 75% of all energy sources. Health end points studied in China in association with air pollution include all-cause mortality, mortality and morbidity due to cardiopulmonary disease, and numbers of outpatient and emergency department visits (Chen et al. 2004).
